Warshawsky Color and Vigor Popular At Exhibit Opened with Reception At Carmel Art Gallery Last Sunday

By PATRICIA CUNNINGHAM

To write a critique of Warshawsky's paintings is one of the least difficult assignments a reviewer could possibly have. They speak for themselves.

Last Sunday afternoon when a reception at the Art Gallery opened his exhibition, this fact was obvious to everyone who had the pleasure of seeing them and listening to the enthusiastic comments of the assembled guests. Had Warshawsky himself not been there, the force and magnetism of his personality would still have been present. His pictures convey the artist just as perceptibly as they show the subject matter which he paints with such emotional drive and technical virtuosity. The comments of his various admirers testify to this fact.

"The force and virility of his brush stroke," struck one enthusiast.

"He must be a man of great courage. It shows in his work," said another.

"His detail is so expressive," remarked someone else, "but he uses it with such an adroit form of economy that it never becomes monotonous."

"Every painting is fully descriptive of the subject but he has no stereotyped method of expression. Each one is entirely different," was another remark.

"He was an athlete. It shows in his compositional space. The athlete's concept of form and continuity would account for that," said someone else.

Well, so it went. Columns of admiring quotations could be written here. The above were characteristic of the general reaction. An artist couldn't hope for more gratifying response.

It was especially interesting, in the face of this universal enthusiasm, to see which, if any, of the paintings were particularly favorites. And, from the evidence it was possible to gather, it would seem that "Dark Water" is by far the choice of most observers. Why this should be so is a most intriguing question. In an array of such brilliant color and dramatic subject matter, why should what is almost the quietest painting in the show be general favorite? It is a medium sized picture telling a very simple story, the reflection of a group of houses in water. The color is in cool greyed tones so reserved in value and intensity as to present a uniform color screen through which the subject emerges dimly. You have really to look at this painting to make it out. What is its great appeal? It is moody in contrast to most of the other paintings' emotional fire. It is subtle, reflective. It "holds back" so the observer feels a mystery and a reserve which may well be the secret of its great charm. And the subject matter is secondary to color and mood.

Another great favorite is the portrait of the boy in the blue beret, "Jean Pierre." His symetrical child's face is painted very smoothly in the ruddiest flesh tones. His expression is calmly self-possessed. He wears his beret

The Editor's Column

Off on the Wrong Foot

The city council did a good job of work Wednesday night in quashing the Business Association's proposal for a chamber of commerce for Carmel. But before the rest of the citizens return too harsh judgement against the business people for "trying to ruin the town," they should know that a chamber of commerce was not the original intent of the Business Association two months ago when it launched its campaign for city tax money to help keep the information bureau going. In its efforts to clear the legal hurdles to city money for the information bureau, the Business Association found itself advocating a chamber of commerce, something which we believe the business men of this town want no more than the rest of the citizens.

It was unfortunate that the information bureau campaign was begun in the first place, though understandable when one knows the nature of the Business Association and the situation confronting it. The association has a large membership of busy people who leave the management of the association affairs in the hands of a few officers. They haven't time to turn out to meetings to make their will known on issues that may come up nor do they have time to give sufficient thought and consideration to the merits of proposals made by their officers. The few in charge, without any way of getting a true picture of what the membership wants, make out as best they can.

The result is an irresponsible organization that frequently finds its name lent to various enterprises which the majority members do not know about and probably would disapprove of if they did.

In allowing their organization to come to such a pass, the business people are certainly deserving of criticism, but it would be unfortunate if the impression were allowed to continue that the majority of them are chamber of commerce minded.

City Council Votes Down Business Association Plan For Chamber of Commerce

By WILMA COOK

In expressing his opinion of the Business Association's request for city support of an Information Bureau-Chamber of Commerce for Carmel, Mayor P. A. McCreery made a statement at the council meeting Wednesday night that should be framed and hung in the council chamber to serve as Carmel's Magna Charta, a reminder to future councils of what Carmel is and the course Carmel wishes to pursue.

When he finished, Eben Whittlesey, representing the Business Association, requested that the other members of the council express their opinions of the Business Association's plan. He got his wish. Following the councilmen's remarks, the vote was taken and although up to that moment, one council member had favored the Business Association plan, when City Clerk Peter Mawdsley called the role, denial of the Business Association's request was unanimous.

The Mayor's statement:

"The proposal before us is one that is not to be considered lightly. It means the elimination of another Carmel tradition, a tradition that has always been upheld by our founders and by the majority of citizens who have come here to rest and to forget their activities in a commercial world. Under strain and stress of war conditions we are apt to forget our former peaceful, quiet way of living, and I wish to preserve for our community the continuance of our way of life long after the war is over. Carmel must be kept a different community and we should strive forever to keep out commercial exploitation. We do not want to be "just another town." We do not want paved sidewalks, house numbers, street lamps, mail delivery, unintelligent destruction of trees and shrubs. We do want charm, atmosphere and uniqueness. I am confident that the beauties and loveliness of our Carmel, and our way of living, can carry themselves without commercial exploitation.

We have never had to resort to Chamber of Commerce advertising or goodwill or welfare or whatever you wish to call it. We have come a long way and have secured a majority of the right people during the past quarter century, and for the rest of the century I believe we shall get along very well without submitting to this proposal to make of us what we, as Carmel citizens, are definitely opposed to.

The city council members for the past two years, with the exception of the Art Association and the Bach Festival, which has now been discontinued, have not and should not make appropriations and allowances of public funds for any measures not pertinent to actual expenditures necessary for carrying on the conduct of the city's business, and the recent completion of the budget of 1944 would not permit us to deviate from this practice."

The mayor had preceded his statement by saying that he had discussed the revised plan offered by the business association with the city attorney. That it was the city attorney's opinion that by turning the information bureau into a chamber of commerce the city might legally allocate funds

George Outland Here, Reports to His Constituents

Congressman George Outland will conduct a round table discussion at a meeting of the Carmel Women's Democratic club Sunday, August 8 at 3:00 p.m. at Sunset school library.

He arrived on the Peninsula yesterday, saw a military demonstration at Fort Ord, visited the Community Center nursery school in Monterey, was entertained informally with dinner at the Mission Ranch Club and spoke at an open forum at 8 o'clock at the Carmel Playhouse. The forum meeting will be reported in detail in the next issue of the Pine Cone Cymbal.

Today Mrs. Gertrude Bardarson will interview him over KDON at 4:15 and at 8 p.m.

During his visit in Carmel, he is the house guest of Mrs. Paul Low.

"Pop" Smith Throws Rice, Bakes a Cake, Has a New Daughter

Cecil "Pop" Smith met the Del Monte Express Tuesday evening with a bag of rice. His son George and Miss Hazel McCormick had left Saturday morning for a jaunt to San Francisco ostensibly to "take in the shows" but "Pop" has lived long enough to make an accurate guess as to the inevitable outcome when two young people go around in misty eyed confusion.

Following the rice shower the wedding party taxied to "Pop's" apartment in Carmel where "Pop" had a wedding cake waiting for his new daughter.

Then they told him all about it: how they had been married in Carson City, "The friendliest place on earth, except Carmel," and how they had ridden on the wheezy Virginia and Truckee that runs from Reno to Carson City, "a little old gasoline job painted red that huffs and puffs and barely

Rich Quality of Laurence Voice Pleases Audience

By RACHEL MORTON

The Carmel Music Society gave its subscribers and their guests a real treat in the Song Recital given by John Laurence in the high school auditorium last Sunday afternoon.

When John Laurence began to sing it was at once apparent that he is the possessor of an unusually beautiful baritone voice. The smooth rich quality caressed the ears of the enthusiastic listeners during a program varied enough for all tastes.

The Italian group which opened the program was well chosen, the music lending itself admirably to Mr. Laurence's distinct legato style of singing.

Lieder singing is an art in itself, and few there be who master it. German music requires great viril-

Larsen Conveys Greetings and Gifts to Carmel

Eiler Larsen, whose flowing white beard and glowing eyes were once favorite subjects for the brush of Carmel artists and a cause of awed interest to Carmel tourists, is apparently celebrating Christmas somewhat in advance, for this week John Abernethy, in his capacity of president of the Carmel branch of the Monterey Country Trust and Savings Bank received a letter containing a check for a round sum plus ten cents with instructions to deposit the round sum to Larsen's account and to use the ten cents to purchase a bone for Pal, the town dog, now in retirement.

At the same time the editor of the Pine Cone Cymbal received a copy of "The Managerial Revolution" by James Burnham and a number of dimes. Larsen's instruction to the editor were to read the book and then present it to the Ralph Harrison Memorial library. The dimes were to be used to "treat a few of Carmel's lovely children to an ice cream cone on my behalf."

In his letter to the Pine Cone Cymbal, mailed from Chicago Park, California, he expressed the hope that "yourself, everyone of your customers (you, our dear readers and advertisers) as well as every visitor to your enchanting city enjoy a truly happy summer."

Mr. Abernethy has carried out

White Mice Share Honors with Cast In "Dark Tower"

By ROBERT McDUFF

"The mountain labored, and brought forth — a mouse." But when those two dramatic peaks of our generation, George Kaufman and Alexander Woolcott, labored on "The Dark Tower" they brought forth not less than two mice, white ones at that. Securely caged, Abelard and Eloise play their tiny parts well, supported by one of the ablest human casts gathered for many a season in a local play.

"The Dark Tower," opening a week from tomorrow night at the Playhouse, is billed as "comedy melodrama." Accordingly it follows theatrical tradition by having its virtuous people very very good, "but when they are bad they are horrid." However, no mustached, hoarse-voiced, unbelievable villain of mid-nineteenth century melodrama is Stanley Vance. A suave and quiet man, yet "the lowest form of animal life," according to his maiden aunt-in-law Martha Temple, he succeeds for a time in holding the fate of the others on the stage in his smooth deft hands. Then the balance-wheel turns, all is well again and we breathe freely once more.

Mr. Kaufman's sardonic relish of the harum-scarum home life of actors, previously experienced by playgoers in "The Royal Family," is again evident in the humorous situations and witty dialogue in this latter play, while the collaboration of the late Mr. Woolcott is responsible for the "psychology" and mysterious motivations of the interesting people created jointly by these two able playwrights.

Tickets will be on sale at the uptown office of the Playhouse, Dolores street opposite the Bank of Carmel, beginning next Monday, from eleven to four daily.

Airplane Observers Allowed Deduction From Income Tax

An official announcement was received from Washington this week by the airplane observers at Yankee Point, Cypress Point and other posts throughout the country which will materially lighten the burden they have carried voluntarily all these months.

Hitherto, the full expense for gas and oil used in transporting watchers to and from their posts has been carried by the individuals performing this valuable service. The new government regulation provides that all such expense may be added to the total of income now defined as tax exempt under the pay-as-you-go plan.

Gordon Miyamoto would have been graduated from Carmel high school this spring with the boys and girls with whom he started in the first grade at Sunset. But the war came and Gordon finished high school in the relocation camp at Poston, Arizona. Homesick for Carmel, he wrote to Mrs. Grace Boke, who has been a friend of his family since his mother came to Carmel from Japan in 1910, the picture bride of Tom Miyamoto. Three of his brothers are in the United States Army. His mother, father and one brother, are at camp with him. In the letter printed below he addresses Mrs. Boke as "Granny." She is John Todd's grandmother and he and John Todd have been chums from the days when they made small-boy forrays on Mrs. Boke's kitchen.

The Miyamotos, who had the vegetable gardens on the Carmel River, were liked and respected in the community. When the order was issued barring Japanese from this area, and the Miyamotos prepared to leave, Gordon's classmates at high school expressed their regret at his going in a group of letters any boy might well treasure.

Poston, Arizona

Dear Granny:

It's such a sunny day, and there's nice music playing next to our room. I decided to lie on my bed and take a little nap. As I looked up to the window and out to the blue sky, the first thing that came to my mind was being at your home. I just lay there thinking and bringing back memories of what John and I used to do on a day such as this.

It reminds me of the Sundays when John and I would get up late in the morning, mess your kitchen up, and then you would ask us to be sure and tell you where we were going. Almost every time you asked us this question, we would reply, "Down to the river." The river always assured us of something to do.

After a day's fun down at the river, up we came to your house again where you would be listening to some sweet music, such as is playing next door, when you weren't busy hustling here and there. Then a nice hot dinner, and after that, John and I would listen to the radio or now and then run up and down the beach in the moonlight.

Gee, Granny, to me these things are swell to think about, and it puts a lump in my throat. I sort of got homesick so I decided I would write this letter to make me feel I was talking to you.

I know John and I will be more grown up when we are back home together again, but I hope we will be able to do some of the things we did before.

I am trying to go to the National Youth Administration in what ever state I can go to to do my bit in the National defense by training to be an auto mechanic. I hope you think it advisable for me to do so. You used to give me such sound advice back home. I'm very interested in this field, too. I'm hoping to be drafted out there. If I am, I might be able to come back to see you and the rest of my friends.

I hope Mrs. Todd and John are all well. My love to them, and take care of yourself.

As always, Gordy.

Hello Granny: Poston

At the moment I am in the office of the Transportation Department. I drive trucks to Camp 1, 2 and 3, and also take the mail-run to Camp 3.

I wanted to tell you that I graduated last Saturday night. A simple ceremony, but it was rather nice. We marched along in two aisles of the amphitheater. No cap and gowns—too hot for them. We wore white shirt and dark tie and pants. When I left

"Polio" Case in Carmel, Four in Monterey County

There are four cases of infantile paralysis in Monterey county, two in the Salinas area, one in Fort Ord Village and one in Carmel, the latter two reported within the last week, Dr. Kenneth C. Sheriff, county health officer said yesterday.

Considering the extent of the epidemic throughout this state as well as in Oklahoma and Texas, Dr. Sheriff said the incidence is light in the county. He stated that "the epidemic has not reached the proportions of 1934 even in the harder hit areas."

He also said that a rabid report had come in on a dog that had bitten Linne Bardarson last week in Carmel Woods. Linne has received Pasteur treatment. This is the second case of animal rabies in the past two weeks, the other reported in Del Monte Heights. The quarantine is still in effect, Dr. Sheriff pointed out, and will continue to be enforced.

That elusive "gift for someone who has everything" has just turned up at MERLE'S TREASURE CHEST. It is a decorated candle, or a pair of candles, each with a lovely, fragile-looking (actually pretty sturdy) wax flower twined on the stalk like an exquisite tinted carving. They're definitely unique for bridge prizes, or just something to be given, and some one with a flair for beauty might use these flowered tapers to complete the wrapping of some larger gift.

Wedding bells in white on pure white stalks, cala lilies, iris and pale camelias were among the motifs we saw. They come in 8, 12, and 18 inch lengths, and also in short, "sitting" candles where the flame burns at the center of a full blown rose.

Mrs. Kellogg Speaks On Polish Relief At Palache Home

By UNA JEFFERS

Mr. and Mrs. Whitney Palache were hosts to a group of their friends one day last week, the guest of honor being Mrs. Vernon Kellogg, long the ardent friend of Poland and latterly, executive head of the committee formed to equip the Paderewski Hospital in Edinburgh. Mrs. Kellogg had promised to talk about this project. Among her listeners were Mrs. Caroline Pickit, the original chairman of the Polish Relief Committee in this community and Noel Sullivan its present chairman. Guests from out-of-town were Bishop Block and wife of San Francisco.

Last year when the head of the hospital, Dr. Jurasz came over to the United States to interest people in the needs and aims of this great work, he paused here for a few days of much needed rest at Hollow Hills Farm. His brilliant mind and the sense of tragedy and of great human understanding made him a memorable figure to those who met him. Mrs. Kellogg said that in a recent letter he had referred again to his grateful remembrance of an hour he had spent in the Palache home with its particular flavor of fine serenity and good-will. She felt this house was, therefore a particularly sympathetic place in which to discuss the hospital.

It happens that Scots and Poles work together with fine understanding. When great numbers of refugees from Poland gathered in Edinburgh, among them many doctors and surgeons, a plan was formed to establish a Polish hospital with a Polish staff in charge. Hard pushed as the Scots were themselves by every kind of war necessity, they managed to provide a suitable building and various supplies. The committee over here headed by Mrs. Kellogg undertook the enormous task of equipping it. First to raise, or begin to raise, the large sum of money necessary at a time when so much was already being given to so many causes. Then to get the supplies over. Providence helped her again and again in this. Once a chance meeting with a person in authority got her a priority for shipping a desperately needed ambulance. Another time a shipment of supplies was rushed from our shores to the docks of Edinburgh in three weeks time. Sometimes individuals have carried over small surgical instruments of particular importance. She spoke of help the committee have been able to give to the young Polish students in Edinburgh who, tragically earnest and without resources, were striving to complete their studies. So many of them were learning medicine, architecture and engineering, three professions looking forward to the re-establishment of Poland after the war. It is very important that plans have already been made to transfer the Paderewski Hospital in working order to Poland as soon as feasible.

Mrs. Kellogg was happy to be able to announce that the Paderewski fund has been allotted $125,000 toward its expenses for 1943. This comes out of the money allocated to Poland by the National War Chest. This chest must be replenished in the forthcoming fall drive. She also stressed the importance of small contributions given directly to the Paderweski Fund. It was by gifts of dollars and quarters that the committee was first enabled to begin its work.

Mrs. Kellogg is a convincing speaker, her glowing enthusiasm and grasp of every detail make her particularly so on this subject.

Afterwards, the guests, lingered over their tea to question and comment and departed reluctantly at sunset.

Carmel I was in hopes of being able to graduate with John's group, but things seem to have changed around a bit. I at least have my diploma; I guess that's what counts.

About that N.Y.A. school, you may have read in the papers that all of that was cancelled to all of us. I really wanted to go to it so I at least could be doing something. I don't know when I will be drafted, but when I do, I hope I will be able to see John some place. I really miss all the fun we used to have together, and I miss Mrs. Todd's salads and your wonderful cooking, and all my friends in general.

Tell John to write to me about the fishing and everything else that goes on in the river. Tell him I tried to swat some carp down at the Colorado River, but I didn't seem to enjoy it as I did in the good old Carmel River.

This is about all for now, Granny. Please don't work too hard.

Always,
Gordy.

"Good Boy" Robs 7 Carmel Houses, Nabbed by Police

He made good marks in school. He spent hours poring over books in the library—good books. His model airplanes were constructed with painstaking care. Only 13 years old, he worked hard at mowing lawns and doing odd jobs, and had money to jingle in his pocket. When the police started inquiring about him, the neighbors said, "That's not the boy you want. He's a good kid."

But he was the boy the police wanted and when confronted with the plaster cast of his bicycle tire and his shoe print, he confessed to seven robberies in the past eleven months, and led the police to a shack where he had hidden $800 worth of jewelry, a rifle, a shotgun, and a cache of women's shoes and underwear.

Three of the depredations were made this last week end.

He entered the home of Lt. Gerald S. Juster on Torres street and took about $500 worth of jewelry as well as clothing. He broke into the home of Mrs. Serena M. Brandon on Crespi Lane and made off with $100 worth of clothing and jewelry, and he not only ransacked Fred Bechdolt's writing shack carrying off a rifle and a shotgun, but he left ten candles stuck in their own wax burning on a table, and built a fire of papers on the floor. Fortunately, the candles and the paper fire burned themselves out without igniting the shack.

At both the Juster and the Brandon homes the track of his bicycle showed in the roadway, and his footprints could be seen in the garages. Police made plaster casts and after they had traced the boy from descriptions of those who had seen him leaving one of the rifled houses, had the evidence which elicited a speedy confession of not only the last three burglaries, but four others earlier in the year.

"There's nothing abnormal about the boy," Chief Roy Fraties said. "His home conditions aren't right. He's a bright boy and placed in the right environment he could be straightened out. If we only had provisions for placing juvenile delinquents in foster homes instead of putting them in reform schools."

He'll be turned over to the juvenile authorities.

THE MATOOR MIND

By PEGGY PALMER
(From the Pine Cone Files, Issue January 4, 1929)

Well, I was frightfully annoyed this morning because papa called me to go to the telefone about ten o'clock and I should think anybody would have better sense than to go phoning a young girl at this unearthly hour. So I was just about to give them the very Dickins when I discovered it was Margaret Reynolds and she told me something so interesting that I forgot all about being annoyed!

Anyway, Margaret sed there was a whole bunch of movie stars camping out on Point Lobos, and she sed she and Hester Showniger and a lot of other people were all going to quit school and get a job as an extra! Because it seems they are going to take a picture by the name of Evangaline, starring Miss Dolores Del Rio, the Melinkoly Mexikan!

Well I was awfully thrilled at this point, because peeple are always saying how I look a lot like Miss Del Rio, on account of my beautiful teeth, so I thought I ought to right out to Point Lobos and tell her about this uncanny resemblance or something!

When I got out to Point Lobos I saw practickly half of Hollywood standing around, and there were a couple of pasteboard houses which were supposed to be the village of Grand Pray. And just then I noticed this perfeckly gorgeous looking brunette sitting under a cypress tree singing Ramona in Mexikan so I went over and sed, Well, well, Miss Del Rio, it sertainly has been a long time since I saw you!

Then Miss Del Rio stopped singing and she sed she could not seem to remember my face so I sed Well I saw you in the Loves of Carmen at the Manzanita theater several months ago! I was sitting in the third row on the end! But lissen here, all joking aside, Dolores, I have a wonderful surprise for you! I gess you'll be so surprised you acktuly won't believe it! Then I went on to tell her how I am a star reporter on the Pine Cone and I gess she ought to be quite honored to be interviewed by the largest newspaper in Carmel!

Well Miss Del Rio was awfully sweet about the interview and she started telling me how she was born in an old mansion in Mexicocoa and then she went to school at a convent and the deer nuns simply had cat fits when she decided to go in the movies! And at this point Miss Del Rio happened to notice it was twelve o'clock so she sed she would have to get on the set and start acting!

Then all the camera-men began grinding and a gentleman by the name of Mister Fox started screeming thru a large megafone and all the actors pretended to be acting. First this awfully good looking young man by the name of Mister Roland Drool got out on the Set and Mister Fox sed, Lissen, Roland, you are supposed to be a French guy by the name of Gabrial, see? Now look tragick! So Mister Drool started making faces at the camera and then Mister Fox sed O. K. Roland, now stop looking tragick and register emotion! Now pretend you are looking for Evangaline. Thats the dame your supposed to be in love with, see, and she got lost or something!

After that Mister Drool began hunting for Evangaline behind a stump and under a rock but he couldn't find her anywhere, and at this point Mister Fox started tearing his hair and he sed Say, what in the devil comes next? Where in blazes is that continuity man?

Then I stepped up and I sed, Lissen, Mr. Fox, praps I could be of some assistance, because I hapin to know qwite a lot about the subjeck of Evangaline on account of learning it all by heart when I was in grammar school! You see, Evangaline and Gabriel waste their whole life trying to find each other in vain and finally when they are old and feeble they meet in the poor house or something! Awfully jolly plot, don't you think so, Mister Fox?

Hell's Bells, sed Mister Fox, glaring.

But I reely think before you get any farther, I sed, I ought to tell you that you're doing the whole thing absolutely wrong, Mister Fox! Because I'm sure if Mister Longfellow was directing this pitcher he would not approve of the way you are doing it at all!

Reely, sed Mister Fox, I must beg to be excused from this delightful chat. We have to go to lunch now!

Well nobody invited me to have any lunch, so I went down on the beach and opened a clam, and when I got back Miss Del Reo was walking up and down ringing her hands and feeling very sad because she had lost Gabriel. Well I thought that was awfully silly for Miss Del Reo to be carrying on that way, when anybody could see that Gabriel wasn't lost at all, because he was sitting over on a barrel looking at himself in a large mirror!

And I was just going over to tell Miss Del Reo where Gabriel was when I tripped over a board and the entire village of Grand Pray fell down on top of me. And I would reely rather not discuss about what happened next.

(Whatever difficulties Peggy had with Mister Fox must have been satisfactorily adjusted after a suitable lapse of time because two Pine Cone issues later we read—)

Well, I have been a movie acktress for a week now, and I am getting ahead awfully fast, in fack I intend to speak to Mister Fox about having my salary raised!

Of course when I started out in Picktures I was only an Extra like Clay Otto and Elizabeth Sampson and Elaine Carter and all the other Carmel people. And then yesterday I got my Great Opportunity! It happined while we were doing the Funeral Scene marching up and down before the Camera in a Solim procession, and all of a suddin I started laughing because Kelly Clark looked so perfeckly idiotick in this blond wig and a pair of anteek knickers. And at this point Mister Fox yelled at me thru a Megafone and he sed Hey You, get the hell outa this pitcher! This is a Solim procession, not a Comedy!

Then I reelized that Mister Fox did not want me to waste a lot of valuable energy in a mob scene, because he was probably saving me for a big emoshnal scene or something, so I went over and sat in Miss Del Reo's Roles-Royce and I have been sitting around ever sinse. Because I do not think a Future Star ought to be associating with common Extras in fack I do not feel that I ever ought to talk to them, exsept Connie Heron, and Connie is sort of an Extra-Extra now, because Mister Fox took some Close-Ups of her on a hay stack!

Anyway at this point the leading man arrived, that's Mister Roland Drool, and he arrived in a large red and yellow Limoseen with a Chowffer and a Footman in front and a Masoose and a personal maid hanging on behind. Of course I was frightfully thrilled, because I have been sort of madly in love with Mister Drool ever since I saw his photograf in Film Fibs. It was on an advertisement for Lady MacBeth Beauty Cream. And Mister Drool is even more bewtiful in person than he is in picktures, on account of having large soulful eyes with a Smoldering Fire in them, and the most intreeging brunette whiskers on his upper lip!

Then Mister Drool got out of his Limoseen and sat down under an umbrella so he would not ruin his complexion by getting a freckle, and then his persnal maid started giving him a marcelle.

Anyway, by the time I went home to dinner

POETRY

ELEMENT CONSISTENT

Odd, though change is upon us all,
Violent and perpetual—
Kingdoms crumble, monarchs fall,
Good and bad trade pedigree
At the whim of time or geography;
Climates, fashions, calendars,
Topography and motor cars;
Manners, creeds and nomenclature
Bow to it—that only the nature
Of mortals down from the time of Adam,
Seems intent, come weal, come woe,
Upon remaining status quo.

—MARION DOYLE

NIGHT

The waves are paler than the white sands on the shore.
Their endless music is subdued, as though
They whisper in their sleep.
Above the quiet earth and moving sea,
Spread star-filled skies, their shining net
Studded with jewels—still, still
As creeping shadows; yet
By listening hearts their chant is heard.

—EMELINE HARRINGTON

DUST UNTO DUST

A hill drops a stone—
A tree drops a leaf—
Flesh whitens to bone—
Bird-songs are brief.

A hammer flakes rust—
A wall drops white grain—
Red bricks shed red dust—
A road becomes lane.

A song falls away—
Strong voices die—
Eye-luster shades gray,
And life whispers by.

Chinese Puppets Tread the Boards In New Production

A new set of Chinese actors will be released from their cases to appear in the marionette play opening Saturday at the Scott's Marionette Theatre. King Midas and Goldilocks, who have been tramping the miniature stage for the past three weeks will be stowed away with their 80 or more wood relations, well preserved with moth balls.

The Scotts are proud of this group of wooden actors and of the fantasy, The Prince Enchanted, which they will present. Both play and actors are the product of Mrs. Scott's pen and carving tools.

There is a very wicked villain who tries to defraud the honest widow of her ancestral estate by a marriage between his idiot son and the widow's beautiful niece. This dastardly plot is foiled in an amazing and puppetty fashion.

There will also be a number of variety acts including the Georgia Ministrels. This bill is designed for adults and older children, though the little ones will find a lot to enjoy. Performances will be at 2:30 and 8:15 Saturdays and Sundays. There will be no shows on Saturday, August 14.

I was so violently in love that I couldn't eat anything and my Ant Mrs. Croot was awfully annoyed, in fack she sed, Margaret, I wish you would kindly stop looking like a sick Cat.

Why, I sed, I am simply in love, Ant Croot, in fack I never knew I could be in love like this. Because I reelize now that Frank Bunn and Wendell Dreap and all those other boys were merely little ripples on the Bottimless pool of Eternity of something!

Disgraceful! sed my Ant Croot, who is this Germ anyway Has he got an income? What is his sochal standing?

He isn't a Germ, I sed emphatickly, his name is Roland Drool and he's in the movies—

I shall investigate the young buffer at once! sed my Ant Croot and went upstairs!

Well when I got home from my Work tonight I expeckted to get the very Dickins, but instead of that Ant Croot was positively beeming and she sed My Deer Child, I am so proud of you! I have been reading about Mister Drool in Screen Screams! Why he comes from a frightfully aristocratick Spanish fambly—his father's a Hombre or something and his mother was one of the Fandangoes of Madrid!

Why Ant Croot, I sed, what on earth are you talking about? I'm not in love with Mister Drool any more—at least maybe I was yesterday, but I realize now it was only the meerest pebble on the Endless Beech of Eternity or something! I'm in love with George O'Brien now, Ant Croot, and his papa's a Pleeceman!

Dobermans Can Join the Marines, See Frank Decker

Doberman Pinscher owners are being asked by the Marine Corps to enlist their dogs for service with the Leathernecks through Dogs For Defense, local representative, Frank Decker, Box 1308 Monterey, Telephone 6927.

To supply the needs of a new training center set up at Mare Island, under the supervision of Major Thad Talmadge Taylor, and under the direct charge of Captain T. J. Palmer, thirty dogs a week are needed.

Though Monterey Peninsula Dobermans cannot go into training at Mare Island until the local rabies quarantine has been lifted, dog owners are asked to get in touch with Mr. Decker to enlist their dogs so that when the quarantine is lifted the canine marines can be sent out immediately. Already a number of Peninsula dogs have signed up for the Army, Navy and the Coast Guard.

Dan Welty Pinch Hits for Law in First Theatre Play

"The Boss of Bar Z" with its fourteen-act olio plays at the First Theatre, Monterey, this Saturday and Sunday nights, August 7, 8, the successful show going into its third week-end. One of the traditional "pinch-hittings" will take place tomorrow night and Sunday when Dan Welty, one of the Gold Coast aces, steps into Darwin Law's role of the villain, Charles Huntley, cattle-rustler and thief, operating on Bar Z.

Dan will also be seen in the various olio acts for which Darwin is cast. Reason for the week-end substitution is that Darwin Law, who works for the Pacific Telephone Company, is away on his annual week's vacation.

Last Saturday evening, following the performance, the Denny-Watrous Management invited all the Troupers out into the bar for tamales, salad, cake and coffee, in celebration of Jim Jensen's one hundredth performance, and of Bobbie McMenamin's soon-expected leave for Navy service.

"The Boss of Bar Z," which will run every weekend through August, is directed by Douglas Hume.

to repair APPLIANCES

YOUR APPLIANCE REPAIR DEALER is an important man to know these days. He tries to keep as many replacement parts on hand as priorities, allotments, etc., will allow him. He has studied appliance repair, equipped his shop with the parts and repair tools needed to keep your home appliances operating efficiently for the duration.

Just think now! What on earth would you do if your heating system quit cold...if your washing machine stopped work in the middle of a washing...if your vacuum cleaner decided it was through working for you...if your refrigerator got temperamental?

Any one of these happenings would give you a bad day. But fortunately you can do two things about it.

First, you can help avoid such annoyances by proper care and use of your appliances. Use them without abusing them. Keep them cleaned up regularly for more efficient operation. Keep them oiled according to instructions.

Second, when appliances go dead, call the "specialist in repair." He is your authorized appliance repair dealer. Each office of this company has a list of these men. Call your local P. G. and E. office when one of your home appliances breaks down and you don't know where to have it repaired.

Duration-ize your appliances with timely repair!

Gas and Electricity are Vital in War Production even though they are not rationed and are cheap to use—do not waste them!

Laurence Sings At USO Canteen

By JIM COOKE

Saturday night the Barn Door Canteen at the Carmel USO again thrilled its audience, composed of service men, pretty hostesses and civilian guests: Miss Mary Theresa Walsh, Dr. James L. Hagerty, Miss Marcia Haskell, Mrs. Elizabeth Durber, Miss Catherine Brusstar, and Miss Inga Howard, who sat in the Angels' Roost where they gained admission by bringing two dozen fresh doughnuts each.

The Barn Door Canteen's last number was a wonderful surprise for everyone because John Laurence, navy baritone, came to sing for them, though scheduled to give a concert the next day. He was accompanied by Harriet Prutsman at the piano. Mr. Laurence sang "All the Things You Are," "On the Road to Mandalay," a little sea song "Tramps at Sea" and "One Alone" from the Desert Song.

Council Says No To Business Assn.

for its support but that he would have to have a schedule of the promotion and publicity the bureau proposed to offer before he could recommend it to the council. "But this is how I feel about it," and the mayor made his statement. Adolph Lafrenz, president of the Business Association, said a schedule could be submitted, and it looked as if the two months' old battle would drag on to another council meeting. N. J. Dougherty, a spectator, spoke in opposition to the Business Association proposal. Then Eben Whittlesey requested an expression of opinion of the other council members. There was no point in continuing with legal jousting if the council in the end would deny the request on its merits.

For the first time in months the mayor was in accord with Mr. Whittlesey.

"I should like to hear such an expression myself," said the Mayor. "Mr. Rowntree?"

Rowntree said he came here twenty years ago not because he thought he could make more money here, he knew he would make less, but because he liked the town as it was. He thought ninety five per cent of Carmel people felt the same way about it and that they didn't want the town changed now. He was not in favor of chamber of commerce advertising.

The Mayor called on Fred Godwin.

"You can't cut down on the Bach Festival and the Art Association to build up a reserve for a war time emergency and then spend it in this way," he said. Then, speaking as a member of the business association, he said, "We have taken care of the information bureau for years when times were not so good, why can't we take care of it now when we Carmel business men are making more than we ever have before? I think we're trying to pass the buck."

Fred Mylar said he thought the information bureau was a good thing but the tax payers as a whole did not want city money spent on its support.

L. L. Dewar, who had supported the Business Association plan from its inception said:

"I favor the proposal, but the rest of the councilmen are in closer touch with the taxpayers than I am. If they believe that the majority do not want it, I'll string along."

Birthday-Housewarming Party

Rich Quality of Laurence Voice Pleases Audience

ity and noble depths of expression. Our sailor lad in his naval uniform is as yet unacquainted with the sea as he is with the spirit of Lieder singing, but both subjects are within his experience, and I have no doubt he will become an expert in each.

The singing of the spirituals had real nobility of interpretation and great beauty of tone. Here his ravishing "pianissimos" were used with splendid effect.

I liked particularly Mr. Laurence's choice of songs in the English group which closed the program. He sang them all with real sincerity and conviction.

The three encores, "Lindy-Lou," "Tramps at Sea," and "Annie Laurie" sent the audience home in a glow of warm satisfaction.

John Laurence's voice itself is of such gorgeous quality, the young man is so essentially musical, that with greater familiarity with the great art of song, he will become a fine artist. He gave great pleasure, both in his singing, and in his genial, dignified presentation.

Harriet Proutsman was an able and sympathetic accompanist.

Stalter Appointed To Police Force

The City Council Wednesday night approved the appointment of Harold S. Stalter, former Pacific Grove Chief of Police, to the Carmel police force to fill the place left vacant by the induction into the army of Woofard Dufur.

Stalter has sixteen years' experience in police work as well as considerable technical skill in radio as he was among the first radio "hams" on the Peninsula and has recently been employed as a civilian instructor at the radio technician school at Fort Ord. In addition to his clerical work in the Chief's office, and his patrol duty, he will be given charge of the upkeep of the police radio.

As soon as he can dispose of his home in Pacific Grove he will move to Carmel with his wife and two children of Sunset school age.

OUT OF SCHOOL NOTES

By HELEN COWAN WOOD

The bird walk conducted by Laidlaw Williams is to be at Cypress Point this Saturday, young people as well as adults who care to accompany the bird study group should meet at Sunset school at 10 a.m. Any offers of transportation will be greatly appreciated.

With next week's activities, the organized recreation program comes to its close. If any of you have been intending to take in one of the events "some of these days," you will have to get there this week. This has been a short summer and a busy one, thanks to the generous backing of the community. Financial support to make the program possible was provided by the City Council, the Parent-Teacher Association, the Business Association, and the students of Carmel high school. Mrs. Howard Clark has acted as chairman of the commitee which planned and directed the activities, with Fred Godwin, Mrs. Ernest Morehouse, Harold Nielsen, and Mrs. Carel J. Hulsewe as members of the committee.

We all greatly appreciate the contributions of those who have provided leadership for the work and play groups: Mrs. Walter Lenahan, who taught the Red Cross Home Nursing course; Mrs. R. B. Stoney and Mrs. A. V. Arnold, who sponsored the Red Cross work room; Mrs. W. H. Trimble, USO work room; Mrs. Paul Beygrau, Eleteth McQuilkin, and Lucile Burtis, pottery classes; Laidlaw Williams, bird study; Malcolm Whitman, airplane model flying; David Marrs, tennis and high school dances; Stella Schnabel, folk dancing, playground, and high school dances; and Delos Bagby ("coach"), playground, gym and swimming.

What the young people think about these times we live in is reflected in a display of their art work now being shown in the windows of an empty store building on Ocean avenue between San Carlos and Mission streets. The collection includes posters, cartoons, and charcoal drawings, and represents the work of students of Carmel high school and Sunset's seventh grade. This work was done as the last problem of the year in Lucile Burtis' art classes. Artists represented in the exhibit include Ray Kalfus, Martin Irwin, Oliver Bassett, Alyce Holm, Evelyn Stovall, Jeannine Viljoen, Joan Carr, George McElroy, Jean Staniford, Helen Varien, David Ferguson, Chan Tysor, Curtis Gorham, Rose Marie Krupocki, Mollie Osgood, Carroll Briggs, Michael Monahan and Patricia Gorman.

The Thursday war-stamp sale at the post office has kept many young people at their habit of setting aside a part of their income each week to back up their brothers and dads. It is quite noticeable that the smaller children are going far ahead of the high school group on the contest poster—that is, up to now! For those high school students who are sad about this situation, remember there are many more of the younger boys and girls and also fewer of them are out of town this summer. However—are you buying yours?

A group of girls will finish the Home Nursing course with today's final examination. Graduates include Betty Dougherty, DuVal Roberts, Ester Van Niel, June Canoles, and Barbara Josselyn. This group will join with those girls who completed the course last spring at high school, to present an exhibit of home nursing skills and a play during the latter part of August.

Basketball is the major interest at school these afternoons. The coach reports a crowd of about 65 at the Pacific Grove-Carmel game last week, and is planning a repeat. The Carmel team lost out in an exciting contest, with a high and close score: 37-38. Bagby had coached both teams, and so had a very hard time on the sidelines. Boys playing on the Carmel team include Jerry and Lee Mohun, Mike Monahan, Dick Gargiulo, Lew McCreery, Newton Goodrich, Paul Artellan, Floyd Adams, Mat Schmutz, Gunnar Reimers and Bill Sapsis.

School begins late this year to allow more time for summer work. September 13 is the opening date, and students who are entering school for the first time should register the week before.

Franklin Dixon Sees Great Talent In Royden Martin

Note: While Carmel for many years has acclaimed the artistic talents of Franklin Dixon, and recognized his tasteful handiwork in the sets without number which he has designed and painted for the Carmel Players and the First Theatre of Monterey, and in the amusing murals he executes on the snack bar mirror of the Carmel USO with bon ami and poster paint, what many in Carmel do not know, is that the first position Franklin Dixon ever held was with the H. Lieber Art Gallery in Indianapolis. There he was in charge of traveling exhibitions from the art galleries all over the world, and in this capacity he gave lectures to the school children of Indianapolis and various civic groups on the old Dutch masters, Corots, the Angelus, Mona Lisa and other traveling art works.

As an interlude to his lifelong interest in art, he enlisted on February 15, 1915, in the British Royal Air Force, distinguishing himself as an ace and continuing in the service until 1922.

In the following article he reviews the current exhibit of Royden Martin water colors at the Carmel Art association gallery.

By FRANKLIN DIXON

The first time I saw a Royden Martin water color at the Carmel Art Galleries I was attracted to it. It was a Carmel Valley scene. The artist had caught that translucent blue the Valley has under certain atmospheric conditions. The handling was simple and direct. It held one. I stood imbued with serenity and peace.

I remember routing out Janie Otto to ask about Royden Martin. I learned he was a Carmel Valley youth. His art training had not been extensive. I said, "Some day I am going to own one of his paintings. Some day he should be recognized as a great painter. One of his pictures, besides being a thing of beauty, is a good financial investment."

Yes, now I own one.

That was four years ago. I have watched Royden Martin develop. A year ago I met him. I wanted to say then, stay away from art schools and art movements. Be yourself. Keep away from any art that might influence you. Instead, we just talked aimiably and I congratulated him on his work.

All my life I have haunted art galleries. I have known dealers in Chicago, New York, London and Paris. I have seen them invest in young artists. Artists with a keen originality that later was lost, through becoming disciples of some school or art movement. I think Royden Martin will always have strength enough to be himself.

The new exhibit of Sgt. Royden Martin, Carmel Art Gallery, shows advancement and improved technic. He is depicting what he sees in a true, sure way. His Arizona subjects, painted between army duties, are a joy to behold. His handling of clouds, rain, desert trees and plants is superb. He catches that rare lighting, individual to Arizona. Grape shadows make you aware of the red dust in the air. Mountains glint with light and shade. Through it all is a history of the terrain depicted. That indefinable something that tells more than placing paint on paper. That is the true mark of great art.

I am saving money to invest in another Sgt. Royden Martin painting.

with an air expressive so exactly of the gallantry of little French boys.

The two portraits of Mrs. Warshawsky excited much interest. The fact that she presided at the punch bowl and looked so very lovely with a red violet rose pinned in her glossy black curls and another at the waist of her clinging black dress made many people demand that Warshawsky paint her on the spot.

Mrs. Elizabeth Cass, curator of the gallery, was co-hostess and is to be thoroughly congratulated on such a successful party. In a pink dress with pink flowers in her hair, she also was extremely provocative to the artistic imagination. Those assisting were: Mrs. Nathan Fryer, Mrs. Richard West, Mrs. Alex Warshawsky, Mrs. John Hausserman, Jr., Mrs. Michael Mikulak, Mrs. Bert Dienelt, Mrs. John Cunningham, Miss Jane Capatosti and Mrs. Martin Flavin.

The Warshawsky paintings, a list of which follows, will be on exhibit for the rest of the month: Old Breton Woman, Of the Soil, Madonna, Jean Pierre, Inn Courtyard, Reflective Autumn, On the Estero, The Royal Cabbage, Terra Cotta, Brass and Flowers, Dark Water, Bustle, The Wreck, Chinese Princess, Odalisque, Power.

makes it over the hill."

"They are to have a typical wartime honeymoon, with the groom leaving Saturday for White Horse, Yukon Territory, to continue with his construction work on the Alcan highway. Vernon Hitchcock is going along to work on the same job. The bride, who came here three years ago from Nebraska, will go on with her work at Fort Ord as medical secretary in the hospital.

"The war will be over when I come back next summer," George Smith said optimistically. "Then people can settle down to making their plans come true."
